Miss Marshall Poses Prettily

How Does It Feel To Be Queen? 'Like A Dream' Miss Mayo Says

By DOLLY LOCKE
Society Editor

"It was like a dream. It didn't seem real." These were the feelings of Millie Margaret Mayo as she rode in the Homecoming parade as Miss Marshall.

The 20-year-old senior said she was really surprised when she was told she had won, adding "I've never won anything before in my life." She thanks her campaign manager, John Mazon, Man junior, for doing an "excellent job." As soon as she heard the good news, she called her mother and a "special fellow" (who didn't know she was running).

This year's Miss Marshall is working her way through college by selling Boy Scout equipment, toys, and children's clothes at Anderson-Newcomb. She has also been cover model for the Anderson-Newcomb "Mademoiselle" show.

Her hobbies include flower arranging, sewing, water skiing, and playing miniature golf. She also likes music, especially Gershwin's "Rhapsody in Blue."

This is her fourth year as a majorette at Marshall, and the second year that she was chosen as head majorette by the other members of the corps. She was also a majorette at Huntington High. She attended Leadership Camp, is Company A sponsor of the ROTC, and a member of the Spiriter's Club. She teaches kindergarten at the Madison Avenue Church of Christ.

Because of her love of children, she is majoring in elementary education. She also has a science minor. After graduation she wants to go to California to teach.

As Miss Marshall she will be in competition for regional queen at the Aviation Bowl game in Dayton, O., Dec. 8 and 9.

Miss Mayo is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Mayo of Huntington, and has three sisters.

State Is Asked To Pay Cost Of Fixing Interior

By JOHN HINES
Editor-in-Chief

University President Stewart H. Smith spoke on three major items before the West Virginia State Board of Education yesterday at their meeting in Charleston. The items were: the fallout shelter, urban renewal and renovation of the two dormitory like structures at University Heights campus.

The plans and specifications of the fallout shelter are awaiting final approval, but there are two items which the Office of Civil Defense Mobilization (OCDM) will not pay or will only pay in part. While the building is under construction a re-location of underground power, sewer and telephone conduits must be taken into consideration. The cost of this will run $20,000 said President Smith and the OCDM has agreed to pay only half of the re-location and installation at the site.

ONLY 'ROUGH' FINISH

In addition the OCDM said that it will only finish the building in the "rough", Dr. Smith continued. Due to the fact that the university plans to hold classes and supplement the present cafeteria space with the use of the facilities, it will be essential that the ceiling, walls and floors of the structure be finished with the use of acoustical ceiling tile and tile floors. President Smith stated that the cost of this would be about $22,000 and the OCDM will not pay any part of it. He added that they won't even pay for the hardware on the doors.

At this meeting he reported that the Home Housing and Finance Administration (HHFA) had asked that the cost be reduced on refinishing the two dormitory-like structures on the second campus.

HHFA URGES CHANGE

Instead of using the bid system, the HHFA suggested that Marshall get a contractor to agree to take the reconstruction on a cost plus basis. This means that the contractor would bill the University only for the cost of the materials used plus 10 per cent. President Smith said that in this way the contractor would be more willing to utilize some of the materials already on the premises, thus dropping the costs.

Recently, the HHFA rejected a plea by the university for funds due because utility installation swelled bid figures out of proportion.

The third item President Smith took before the State Board of Education was the Area G urban renewal project of which the university is part. The project now is in the hands of the Huntington Urban Renewal Agency and Dr. Smith reported to the board on the progress that has been made.

Under the present plan, the Huntington Urban Renewal Agency will get a 75 per cent grant from the HHFA and the university will get a 25 per cent grant. Area G covers the block along Fifth avenue between 19th and 20th streets.

UNDERWOOD TO SPEAK

Former Gov. Cecil Underwood will speak at the Methodist Student Movement meeting at 6 p.m. Sunday in the Student Christian Chapel. Mr. Underwood's topic will be "The Little Known Hardships of Being a Governor." A dinner will be served for 25 cents per person.

1st Blood Drive Set; Trophies Will Be Given

Nov. 15 has been set as the date for the first blood drive of the year. The drive will be conducted in the Student Union on that day from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

This campaign is sponsored jointly by the Student Government and the Red Cross. The blood is used as a special bank to be utilized by students, university personnel and their immediate families. No charges are made for this service.

Competition for trophies signifying the largest number of donors is divided into three categories: fraternities, sororities, and inter-company competition in the Battle Group. Last year's winners in the three sections were: Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity with 52 pints of blood donated; Sigma Sigma Sigma sorority with 37 pints and Company N-1 of the Battle Group with 46 pints.

On the basis of total pints of blood donated, competitive trophies will be awarded after the second blood drive (tentatively set for March) has been completed.

Requirements for donors are:

1. They must be at least 18 years of age.
2. When the donor is between 18 and 21, he must have written consent from his parents or guardian.
3. On the day of the drive, donors are requested not to eat food with heavy or rich ingredients.

Students or university personnel who have need of the blood reserve may make use of the reserves by getting in touch with Tom Morris, Lewisburg junior and co-ordinator of the blood drive commission, or by having their physician do so.

Radio-On-Air Parade Slated

The Marshall Radio Club will hold a parade Monday night and an open house Wednesday in the WMUL studios to mark the official WMUL on-the-air date of Nov. 1.

The parade will start at 7 p. m. at 4th Avenue and 16th Street, according to Roy Collins, Huntington junior and president of the Radio Club.

Bill Hardebeck, Williamson sophomore and chairman of the parade committee, has announced that units from local radio stations, Miss Marshall and the class queens, the ROTC Drum and Bugle Corps, and several high school bands have been invited to participate.

An open house and reception will be held in the radio studios in the Science Hall from 3 to 5 p. m. Wednesday. Refreshments will be served.

Charity Drive Goal In Sight; Deadline Set

The campus chapter of the United Fund, recently re-named the United Community Services, had raised $4,342 by Wednesday; the goal is $5,000. The original deadline for the annual charity drive has been changed from today to Wed., Nov. 1.

The amount received has been donated by both pledges and general donations. The number of donations are totaled daily by Eric V. Core, associate professor of Education and faculty director of Marshall's role in the drive. He is assisted by Mahlon C. Brown, assistant professor of social studies.

Any student who wishes to make a donation to the drive may do so at the Student Government office. Lowell T. Lewis, Barboursville junior, has been designated by Nancy Wood, student body president, to manage the student donations.

Professor Core said: "The drive is a united effort on the part of both Marshall University personnel and students. Solicited help of all those interested parties to help us reach our goal is welcome."

Writer Defends Right To Be Anonymous

Secrecy Vital For Freedom, Author Claims

*Soldiers who wish to be a hero
Are practically zero
But those who wish to be civilians*

Jesus, they run into the millions

The inscription above adorned the wall of an Army latrine during World War II. While hardly a patriotic thought, it is assuredly an honest one. The writer was anonymous, and he remained anonymous despite the commanding officer's screams for "that man's name."

In his anonymity this intrepid soldier joined the ranks of a group numbering in the millions throughout history; a group which includes many of the greatest artists, writers, inventors, and thinkers of the ages. And like many of his anonymous brethren, he chose to remain faceless to protect his life or liberty. He was like the French resistance leader who drew a "V" on the wall outside Gestapo headquarters in Paris in 1943; or like the brave soul who scrawls a cross in some public place in the Soviet Union today. Both have made their point, and both remain alive to crusade for the cause in which they believe. Can anyone seriously suggest that these men should have shouted their names to the sky for the enemy to hear? It is one thing to be brave; it is quite another to be idiotic. Remaining anonymous is often the only way to resist oppression.

SOME RESENT ANONYMITY

Certain elements of the American press resent anonymity, however, even to the extent of castigating those who prefer to keep their names out of print. Thus the newspapers urge that we "stand up and be counted", and that those who believe in something not hide behind a "veil". The inference seems to be that if one does not loudly announce his name to anything he creates or writes, he is a coward and his creations of little value. Is this position valid?

Historically it is senseless for the press to denounce anonymity, and currently it is foolish since the press itself makes use of this same technique.

From the unknown brains behind the latest bank robbery, stretching back through the corridors of time to the caveman drawing on the walls at Altamira, the pages of history are filled with contributions, both good and bad, from those who prefer anonymity. We do not know who carved the Rosetta stone, but we gladly use it to help us understand Egyptian history. The roll call of those who wrote anonymously would include Defoe, Chatterton, Dryden, Voltaire, Butler, Hardy, Samuel Clemens, and myriads of others. Countless artists have failed to sign their creations, and most of our folk music is "authorless".

NAMELESS CONTRIBUTORS

Hardly a day passes during which each of us does not repeat some saying, proverb, or witticism which, while popular, has an anonymous authorship. Examine any sizable compendium of poetry for the number of bits of verse whose author is "anonymous"—shall we discard all literary contributions whose authors did not loudly proclaim their immediate responsibility? We do not know the authors of over half the books in the Christian Bible—this anonymity, however, does not prevent our reading and using the Bible, nor does it keep the press from quoting from this source constantly.

It is, after all, the merit of what is said or done which makes it of value—not who said or did it. The support of a poor or foolish cause by a well known person adds no real merit to the cause, the truth is truth whether a majority votes for it or not.

When you visit Plymouth Rock someday, read the inscription thereon and ponder that it was by an anonymous author. Examine your church hymnals for the number of selections whose authors are unknown. If we were to obliterate from our cultural heritage every writing, every invention, every action for which the person responsible did not immediately shout "I am the guilty one", would not our civilization be the worse for the loss!

REASONS FOR SECRECY

Many writers have quite valid reasons for preferring anonymity while making a point. A minister writing detective stories might prefer that his congregation not know; an ex-convict writing of prison life might expect reprisals if he admits his authorship; a subordinate serving under a vicious superior might fear for his job or future; some individuals want to make a point—no more—caring little for the "honor" or authorship: all these and a thousand other reasons might encourage anonymity.

But a major reason why many who write to newspapers remain anonymous is that they thereby reduce reprisals from the press itself. They may not desire to be drawn into a hopeless controversy, where the press always has the last word. The newspaper can cast the writer into the role of a fool, a fraud, or a moron.

The newspaper has power, prestige, position, and limitless resources. Knowing this, the writer may protect himself by insisting upon anonymity. And, after all, is it not his business to make such a request? If the press defers to him and prints what he has to say, it is surely snide for the newspaper then to chide him for doing what the press cooperates to permit him to do.

HIDDEN SOURCES USED

But the press is not so opposed to anonymity as it often pretends. Probably 90 per cent of those who commit crimes are anonymous at the outset, yet the press regales us with information about such individuals. Read any issue of your local paper for such phrases as "it is reliably reported", "a government official who asks that his name be withheld reports", "general feeling seems to be", and similar admissions of anonymity. (Continued on Page 4)

The Lyceum

Mr. Anonymous

The author of this article has, for obvious reasons, asked that it be printed anonymously. He has also asked that no clues be given that would help to identify him.

In accepting this article, the Lyceum recognizes that in the first issue published Sept. 22 a statement was made against anonymity. However, it is important that there be many different viewpoints from a variety of sources. The more there are, the better informed our readers will be.

For this reason, the Lyceum has waived the stipulation, in this case, that articles must be signed. We think our readers will agree with this decision.

Miss Marshall Off The Campus

BEING TREATED LIKE ROYALTY even in her own home is Millie Mayo who was elected Miss Marshall by the student body last week. Here her mother, Mrs. Wesley Mayo, serves her an afternoon snack while the University queen studies for a test. At right is Miss Marshall's 18-year-old sister, Nellie.

MISS MAYO is working her way through college by selling part-time at Anderson-Newcomb. She shows a Boy Scout uniform to Denny Cahill of 2729 North Terrace. She has also modeled for the Anderson-Newcomb "Mademoiselle" show.

OTHER FORMS OF BEAUTY also interest this Marshall beauty. The head majorette and elementary education major became interested in floral design after she enrolled in a flower arranging course here at Marshall. The flowers have stiff competition in vying for attention when Miss Marshall is around.

Charter Granted Student Nurses

The local chapter of the Student Nurses Association has been granted a charter by the Student Senate and by President Stewart H. Smith. All members of the local group are now eligible to join the West Virginia Student Nurses Association and the national organization.

Twenty-four freshmen are currently enrolled in the first semester of the nursing program. More than 100 prospective nurses applied for admission to the course.

GREEK WEEK DELAYED

Greek Week has been postponed from the week of Oct. 30 until March 19, according to Dave Ballard, Ashland Ky., senior. The postponement was due to Panhellenic's objection that the week of October 30th followed too closely to the Homecoming festivities.

TEKE DANCE TONIGHT

An informal dance will be held at the Tau Kappa Epsilon chapter house tonight from 9 to 1. Dress will be strictly casual.

Anonymity Defended By Writer

(Continued from Page Three) mity. Many news stories come from anonymous tipsters, and reporters have paid fines and risked imprisonment to protect their anonymous aides. Apparently the anonymous is satisfactory if it pleases the press, but horrible should it annoy the newspaper palate. Is it not time that the press, and the rest of us as well, asked only this of what a person says: is it true? Does it make sense? Is it of value? If we answer in the affirmative, what does it matter if the author is anonymous. If we did not know the origin of the Golden Rule, would it still be valid as a guide for our lives?

If you are wise you will defend anonymity—you may need to use it someday.

THE DATING SEASON

I have recently returned from a tour of 950,000 American colleges where I made a survey of undergraduate dating customs and sold mechanical dogs, and I have tabulated my findings and I am now prepared to tell you the simple secret of successful dating.

The simple secret is simply this: a date is successful when the man knows how to treat the girl.

And how does a girl like to be treated? If you want to know, read and remember these four cardinal rules of dating:

1. A girl likes to be treated with respect.

When you call for your girl, do not drive up in front of the sorority house and yell, "Hey, fat lady!" Get out of your car. Walk respectfully to the door. Knock respectfully. When your girl comes out, tug your forelock and say respectfully, "Good evening, your honor." Then offer her a Marlboro, for what greater respect can you show your girl than to offer Marlboro with its fine flavor and exclusive selectrate filter? It will indicate immediately that you respect her taste, respect her discernment, respect her intelligence. So, good buddies, before going out on a date, always remember to buy some Marlboros, available in soft pack or flip-top box in all 50 of the United States and also Cleveland.

A girl likes to be taken to nice places

2. A girl likes a good listener.

Do not monopolize the conversation. Let her talk while you listen attentively. Make sure, however, that she is not herself a good listener. I recollect a date I had once with a coed named Greensleeves Sigafos, a lovely girl, but unfortunately a listener, not a talker. I too was a listener so we just sat all night long, each with his hand cupped over his ear, straining to catch a word, not talking hour after hour until finally a policeman came by and arrested us both for vagrancy. I did a year and a day. She got by with a suspended sentence because she was the sole support of her aged housemother.

3. A girl likes to be taken to nice places.

By "nice" places I do not mean expensive places. A girl does not demand luxury. All she asks is a place that is pleasant and gracious. The Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, for example. Or Mount Rushmore. Or the Taj Mahal. Or the Bureau of Weights and Measures. Find places like these to take your girl. In no circumstances must you take her to an oil-cracking plant.

4. A girl likes a man to be well-informed.

Come prepared with a few interesting facts that you can drop casually into the conversation. Like this: "Did you know, Snookiepuss, that when cattle, sheep, camels, goats, antelopes, and other members of the cud-chewing family get up, they always get up hind legs first?" Or this: "Are you aware, Hotlips, that corn grows faster at night?" Or this: "By the way, Loverhead, Oslo did not become the capital of Norway till July 11, 1924."

If you can slip enough of these nuggets into the conversation before dinner, your date will grow too torpid to eat. Some men save up to a half million dollars a year this way.

'Broncos To Be Tough To Beat,' Coach Snyder Tells Big Green

By RENO UNGER
Assistant Sports Editor

Marshall will take the field against tough Western Michigan tomorrow on its home territory at Kalamazoo.

"They're going to be tough to beat," said Charlie Snyder, head football coach. "So far this season they have been beaten only by Detroit and top rated Bowling Green."

The Broncos are fast but they're big too, the line averaging way over 200 pounds. Their 250-pound tackle, Lomakoski, poses a special threat with his teammate, quarterback Chalbek. Ends Laroe and Shau are a menace to the Big Green backfield with their rushing. Chalbek is a great runner and especially likes to pull an option play.

He is double trouble with his passing. He can pass, concentrating mostly on the ends and halfbacks. "Our work is cut out for us keeping this guy bottled up," says Snyder. "Our ends will really have to stay on the ball."

Last week, for the first time this season, Coach Snyder was able to use some of the less experienced men as alternates for the starters, keeping the regulars from getting so tired and slowing up in the last half. He plans to try this same strategy against Western Michigan and hopes to see results in the last quarter or so. Western Michigan, as well as most of the other teams Marshall has played this year, has two complete teams, and switches the whole team sometimes several times in a quarter.

This tires the Big Green out to the point that it is a large contributing factor in the team's collapse during the last periods of the game.

This week's starters will be: Ends, Jim Michel and Jim Yoho; tackles, Robert Maxwell and Everett Vance; guards, Clyde Pierce and Jim Keatley; center, Rucker Wickline; quarterback, Ralph May; halfbacks, Millard Fleming and Zeke Myers; and fullback, Dixon Edwards.

The 1961 Chief Justice will be distributed from Monday, Oct. 30, through Friday, Nov. 3, at the Chief Justice office from 1 to 4 p. m. After Nov. 3, all remaining copies of the 1961 CJ will revert to the Chief Justice.

QUESTION: How do you feel about the service and facilities of the library?

Becky Rucer, Clarksburg senior:

My main objection is that the library is not open on Sunday. I feel that this is needed for research. I think that the personnel is very helpful and as quick as can be expected.

Pete Yarbrough, Huntington junior:

My only difficulty in the library is checking out and finding periodicals. I think ours is one of the best libraries and I've had no trouble with the personnel. I feel the entire system is very efficient.

Donna Harvey, Baileysville sophomore:

I think that the library is very slow when checking out books, especially downstairs. The upstairs has a much better system.
